

I am responding to the new proposal for the broadcast service known as the Low Power FM. It is my great concern that these stations will have priority over the current FM translators. I currently support and enjoy FM 91.1 K-LOVE radio. I look to this station for support and encouragement in my daily living. I also use this station as a "safe haven" for my children. I have NO concerns that the material on the station will in any way have a negative effect on my family. This radio station has music that both my teen and I enjoy. Without it we would not have the common experience of "I love this song" or "this song really made me feel..." It has opened a conversational ground that otherwise may not be an option. Our community benefits from my teen and I keeping good communication skills between us so that he can feel free to run his tough decisions with me instead of making a poor decision because he has no bond. My community is also benefiting from the "feel good" music because of how I respond to it. It allows me to feel less stress and isolation and therefore affects how I respond to those around me. In conclusion, I strongly object to any preferential treatment that is being proposed to the LPFM broadcast services. It is not reasonable to assume that the standard FM stations do not service the public when in this situation, the station is self reliant financially. The public must support the station for it to exist whether it be by translator or local broadcast. Thank You
